Freya's Pond Update

It has been awhile since I have updated you on my progress with my pond. Let me think where I was up to....That's right last time I was telling you about the crane and how we managed to put the pond in the hole. Well after that we started to fill it up slowly putting water in then back filling the sand around it. After we got about 30cm full we decided to leave it a few days and see how it went. Not so good. There was a leak! I wasn't sure if I was imaging it or not I would check the pond before going to bed and again in the morning. It seemed to be going down slightly was it because of the windy nights and evaporation or very thirsty night bugs! I noticed a wet patch on one side of the tank in the sand so we emptied out the water and had a look. It seemed that the flipping over had weakened the joins and when we put the water in the sicaflex cracked. So I talked Graham into getting into the pond as I was to scared about not being able to get out. He is a lot taller than me and a lot lighter. We rigged up a net for him to use to get out but in the end he just levered himself out. He then talked me into getting in and I must say it was not a pretty sight! Legs waving around as I tried to get in by lying on the side of the pond and Graham having to give me a leg up to get out! Luckily I had the camera safely locked away at those times! We realized when we were in the pond that there wasn't enough sand underneath supporting it. We had thought there was but as we hadn't actually got in the pond before we had been deceived. So I got more sand delivered and started spending my days washing sand under the pond and using a piece of pvc pipe to help it get underneath. We cut out the sicaflex and redid it on the seams. Filled the pond part way to see if all was well. It seemed to be holding so I was happy again. I could have told you about my great fibreglassing job on the filter box but then again with the fumes I sniffed I could have told you anything and not remembered! Once again not a pretty sight head down—bum up! Then trying to squash myself into the small baffle chambers that I had made. Still it is coming along and I have ordered all the fittings needed to put it together so hopefully it won't be to much longer. Tim and Gareth came along and did a great job on the concreting and while they did that I dug another bloody trench. I must admit by the end of the day I was quite exhausted if they hadn't of been there I wouldn't have done it all in one day. I have shoveled more sand than I care to count and I know I still have a lot more to do. This weekend I have recruited another group of fellows to help me move the filter box down onto the concrete pad so you will have to wait for those photos. Once the filter box is there I can start joining the pipe work up and Tim & Gareth will come back to build the retaining walls for me. So keep your fingers crossed and hopefully I won't encounter any more delays. Hope you like the photos of what has been going on around here.

MISSING - ONE BLUE JUDGING BIN

Could you please check what you took home after the show and see if you have a blue judging bin that doesn't belong to you. When we counted up the club's bins there was one missing and we would like it returned please. We understand in the hurry to get home it could have been put in with your gear but we would appreciate it's prompt return.

HERE IS SOME OF THE PHOTOS OF THE FISH THAT WERE SUCCESSFUL IN THE SHOW.

ON MAJOR PRODUCT LAUNCH.COMING SOON

Aquabiome

AUSSIEKOI has been looking for a bead style filter to enhance its filtration range for 2 years. We have looked at many and finally found what we believe to be the best bead filter on the market in Oz. Why do we believe it is the best?

- it is backed by a major Oz company so spares are readily available
- Small footprint, completely self contained on its own skid
- Latest design features incorporated, including a blower for enhanced cleaning and water saving. K1 media for huge protected surface area. 1year full warranty
- AND the best value price on the market.

At our Annual Show a certain Chagoi was behaving very badly jumping continuously in it's vat. A lady came along and leaned over for a better view and, yes, right on cue the Miss Chagoi gave an enormous jump. The lady fell backwards in her startled panic to get away from the vat. Quick as a flash KSWA Member AB, jumped up from his chair, 'be careful lady that one bites real bad' this was met by some laughter from other members who had witnessed the event.

However the best is still to come!

The lady turned to her friend and said, ' this must be why they have nets on the tanks because koi bite people' This IS a true story and no she wasn't blonde!!

AGM IS THIS MEETING

So please consider taking on a committee position so this club can continue to grow and we can keep promoting the wonderful hobby of koi keeping. Don't forget to bring some finger food for our usual get together during the break. Last year there was more food than people and I had a great time filling my belly. So don't miss out—see you there!

After the Annual Show by Ces Graham

By now most of you will have settled down and got back to your normal routine with your prized koi. Some of us are feeling very pleased with the results we achieved and you should be, after all the time and money invested in your hobby. If you went home disappointed you possibly competed with the wrong attitude by expecting the judge to agree with your assessment of the koi on display. After all it is all about enjoying koi, and winning a trophy is a bonus decided by someone else with a lot more experience than most of us. Many thanks to Kate for judging and Terry the shadow judge who both came over from Sydney and made our day such a success. Kate is regarded very highly internationally and was a delight to work with. This year the koi on display were the best we have ever seen and a credit to you all. This year's show was a complete success with a better than average crowd, and the gods were very kind with the weather. Congratulations to the committee members who put in a lot of hours organising the event and to the members working on the Saturday setup and Sunday dismantling. It makes life a lot easier with willing hands helping on the day. Norm proved himself a whiz on the p.a. and came across as a true pro. Being computer illiterate I was very impressed with Rod and his benching team, the paper work was flawless. Presentation night was a lot of fun and the food was great and heaps of it. The trophies were once again something to be seen. I am sure we all thank our sponsors and donators on the night, nearly everyone went home something. The main door prize was again won by the Hansen family, for about the tenth time, I would suggest no numbers on their tickets next year so someone else gets a go!! This month is our AGM and a new committee has to be elected. I know some of you shudder at the thought of being a committee member, but it can be quite rewarding and a bit of fun, if we all sit back and do nothing we don't have a club. What we need is some of you younger members to do your bit and give old fogies like me a break and keep this club going forward. Finally congratulations to Phong Ta who once again won Grand Champion with his superb Showa. This koi has been at the top for four years and is a credit to his keeping skills. Well done Phong and maybe we will see you with the trophy again next year. On behalf of the committee Thank you to everyone and may the coming year be as successful.
